I have recently read an article on glaucoma illness and I was impressed by how good people know what their illness is and how it is treated the best.

One of the patients mentioned that..

Treatment for glaucoma can be in the form of eye drops which must be taken correctly and as prescribed which many patients fail to do therefore resulting in vision loss. Surgery can also be undertaken to treat glaucoma either by laser or conventionally. However this is only a temporary measure as there is not yet a cure. Many people can drive with glaucoma unless their sight loss is advanced. If vision is affected sight aids are available from the patient's opticians or ophthalmologist.
